

Экзаменационная контрольная работа для поступающих в 6 класс демоверсия

Task 1. Прочитайте текст и выберите заголовки к каждому из абзацев, описывающих телепрограммы. Один из заголовков – лишний.

A. Stonehenge is a probably the best-known pre-historic monument in the world. It stands on Salisbury Plain in the south-west of England.

It consists of a group of huge stones that stand on the ground in two circles. In some cases, there is another stone on top of them. There is a big stone in the very centre of Stonehenge. Archaeologists believe it was built between 4,000 and 5,000 years ago.

B. Stonehenge hides a lot of secrets. Like, it's still not clear who built it. One legend says that the Devil placed the stones there. Another legend tells us that the great magician Merlin created the monument. And there's one more theory that thousands of years ago giants turned into these stones. However, these are not scientific explanations. Maybe it was the aliens?

C. The stones of Stonehenge are different but all huge and heavy. The largest stone is about 7 m tall (taller than a giraffe) and weighs about 25 tons (heavier than 5 elephants). The builders of Stonehenge cut them from the rock more than 200 km away and carried to the site. We don't know exactly how they moved these large stones. This is another mystery of the place.

D. Another big question is why people built Stonehenge. This is one of the great mysteries of Britain. Some people think it was a place for religious ceremonies to worship the sun, others say it was an ancient calendar. Archaeologists believe that the ancient builders had some knowledge about astronomy. On 21st June (the longest day), the sun rises directly above the central stone.

I'm Mark Williams. Today I'm a manager in a big international company and I have a flat in central Manchester. But about ten years ago I lived in a small town in the countryside. I sometimes go there now.

It was a lovely town, quite small actually, but to me it was really big. It was my own world. There weren't so many multi-storeyed houses or cars. I also remember that there weren't any motorways. Why? Because the town was very small and we didn't need them!

I can remember its old shops, the grocer's and the baker's where we went to buy fresh bread every morning. It was my duty and I enjoyed it though it was very early in the morning. How I loved that smell! My favourite shop was the bookshop just round the corner from my house. It also had a small library. We didn't have many books at home so I spent hours there reading or just looking through those amazing old books.

There was a small cafe on central square with a little garden around it. My friends and I often had tea and cakes and sometimes sandwiches there after school. I knew the owner, Mrs. Andrews, who was a fantastic cook! Her chocolate cakes and apple pies were the best ever.

And at weekends the square became a vibrant and colourful place as it was market time. Of course, we had a supermarket, clothes shops and even a huge department store. But shopping at a street market was a special experience. It was a big event for the whole town and a time to meet friends, talk and mix with different people.

There was a great choice of entertainment, too. We had a cinema, two theatres, a football pitch and a small music hall. I always had something interesting to do or somewhere to go to.

I'm happy to say that almost nothing changed in my home town. I often go there, it's like travelling back to your childhood.
